The Freak Masons D.T. spearheaded the second wave of artists that came into CF Hawn. (the members are heavily featured on the CF Hawn mixtape series) Certainly though, they come from the same lineage, as frontman, Sunny D, was brought in personally by co-founder Yung Bone the Great.

Known more as a local gangster rapper and boxer, Sunny D fell into the role of crooning futuro, cyber-funk ring master all too easily, and G'Odd responded with a suitably unique take on the production.

Their "Red Light Dis Trick" ep stands in stark contrast to much of the CF Hawn ethos, with a dance party, electro funk vibe, but this is no shallow work. The tracks have great depth and layering that allow spoken word, hard rap verses, singing and robotic chants to mingle freely through a rave gone mad sound scape that is one part joyful, but with a bad trip lurking around every corner.

Claiming to bring their sounds from ancient temple chambers, in service to the "All Freaking Eye", the Masons wish to usher in a new era of Freakdom. Listening to this ep, it seems they may well have succeeded.
